

Grant Supports Hands-On Learning

The health science classes at West Brunswick High School now have a new hands-on learning system provided by a grant from FOCUS Broadband. The grant allowed the school to purchase an Anatomy in Clay curriculum that gives students the opportunity to learn more about anatomy by molding clay into internal body systems.

"This anatomy program has worked well at other schools. We wanted to purchase one to use here, but couldn't because of the cost," commented Dr. Lori Rose, health science teacher at West Brunswick High School. "By funding our grant, it shows that FOCUS Broadband cares about the community by supporting our kids and our programs."
